Pet – breeding cat – show cat ?

No breeder can guarantee how a cat will develop when it grows up and therfor the label "show cat" only refers to the fact that the cat doesn't have any disqualifying faults according to the standard for the breed the cat belongs to. Seller should tell the buyer about the most common characteristics for the breed.

For "breeding cats" the following must be attested by a certified vet:

- that they don't have or have had umbilical hernia
- that the male's testicles are normally developed and correctly placed, meaning that it isn't cryptorchid or monorchid.
- that the cat, if it is an all white (ems code W), can hear and is chipped.

For some breeds there can be special terms that applies for breeding cats – seller should inform the buyer about any known problems within the breed, including if any special test is required before using the cat for breeding. If there is any doubt about this, the seller should make a formal request to one of the main clubs under Felis Danica, or to Felis Danica's breeding council, who will be able to give further information about the matter.
